Dear Ms Forte

RE: 800NOTES.COM

Thank you for your email dated 8 October 2010.

We note that you were recently a defendant in litigation commenced by Houlihan Smith & Company, Inc. and another claimant in respect to the website hosted at 800notes.com. Perhaps you would like to reconsider your statement that "[800notes] is not [your] website", and comment accordingly.

We attach a copy of the judgment for your ease of reference.

Please let us know if you are represented and if so, to whom we should address our correspondence.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours faithfully

Dear Ms Forte

RE: WHOCALLSME.COM

We refer to our email correspondence on Friday, 8 October 2010.

We do not write to you unnecessarily. We write to you pursuant to the Pre-Action Protocols in England. These Protocols set out the standards expected by English Courts in respect to communications and exchange of information between parties prior to issuing legal proceedings. Indeed, there is a specific Pre-Action Protocol in force in England in respect to claims for Defamation. If you wish, you are able to inspect it here: http://www.justice.gov.uk/civil/procrules_fin/contents/protocols/prot_def.htm.

We also enclose a copy of the Pre-Action Protocol for Defamation cases for your convenience.

We note that you are the registrant of the domain name whocallsme.com. The website published at that address, in the same way as 800notes.com, gives no indication of the person responsible for the publishing the website or on whose behalf it is hosted.

Please will you inform the person responsible for hosting the website, or on whose behalf it is hosted.

We note that the same warning appears at 800notes.com/nb/legal.aspx. It is clear from this text that you or the proprietor of the website retains the weblogs recording traffic to both whocallsme.com and 800notes.com, which would naturally include records of submissions of the html forms which are used on those websites to accept postings by members of the public.

We put you on notice that these are likely to be required in legal proceedings. We suggest that you take independent legal advice.

We look forward to hearing from you.
