Dear Governor Romney:

As nearly as we can tell, your campaign has provided no official disclosure of your bundlers. While we cannot be absolutely certain that you are using bundlers – people credited with raising money for your campaign – press reports indicate that you are. In either event, we have yet to receive a response to a series of questions we sent to your campaign in mid-June regarding your bundling disclosure policies.

We observe that George Bush and Dick Cheney, rarely viewed as paragons of transparency, provided far more insight into their campaign's fundraising operations in 2004 than you have thus far offered.

We hope you share our view that transparency is among the best ways to combat the undue influence of special interests. With that in mind, we are asking all of the presidential candidates who are using bundlers to aspire to the highest standards in disclosure of bundling activities by:

- Disclosing bundlers' identities (including cities and states of residence, and employers) on a prominent place on their campaign Web site that is easy for the public to locate;
- Disclosing amounts raised by each bundler within ranges of $50,000, and promptly updating such information each time a bundler's fundraising exceeds a new threshold; and
- Disclosing the identities of individuals from whom bundlers raise money and the amounts contributed.

If your campaign agrees to these changes, please let us know so that we can update our Web site. Please contact Research Director Taylor Lincoln at tlincoln@citizen.org or 202-454-5197.

Respectfully,

Laura MacCleery
